

Fused Glass Studio and Gallery

Studio Seventy Three is home to a group of artists who work with glass to create beautiful and meaningful pieces. Our artists produce functional works of art as well as pieces that honour and celebrate the diverse cultures and identities that shape our community. Alongside our fused glass, we proudly showcase the work of more than ten local artists, giving visitors a wide range of creativity to explore and support.

As a non-profit studio and gallery, we offer many ways to experience the joy of glass art. Whether you join us in the studio, invite us to your space, or create at home with a take-home kit, our programs are designed to be accessible, inclusive and fun for all.

The Community Living Society was founded in the 1970's by a group of family advocates who wanted individualized, community-based services that would allow their children typical, inclusive lives. The CLS believes that all people have the ability and the right to fully participate in, and contribute to, their communities. We work with individuals and their family members to design the type and amount of support needed to help increase independence and realize dreams.

Studio Seventy Three is supported by the Community Living Society.
